

CORRUPTION PLENTY, IS CHARGE

Representative of National Association of Manufacturers Says It Has Been Going on by Wholesale in Connection With the Enactment of the Tariff Bill.

Senate Committee Following "Insidious Trail" Into New Jersey and Will Endeavor to Learn What a Former Governor Heard Over the Telephone About United States Steel.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—(Associated Press Cable)—Martin Mulhall, who has been living in Washington as the regularly retained representative of the National Association of Manufacturers, and who has appeared before the Senate committee investigating the tariff bill, in a statement made last night declares that there has been wholesale corruption on behalf of some interests affected by the schedules of the Underwood bill, and that he is in a position to make good his charges. His statement has created more or less of a sensation here.

(By Federal Wireless Telegraph.)
WASHINGTON, June 30.—(Special to The Advertiser)—George W. Perkins may be called by the Senate committee investigating the tariff bill, when it reconvenes after the Fourth of July, to tell of an interesting telephone conversation which he had on one occasion with David Lamar of New York, who is being sought by subpoena service.

Information has just reached the committee that several years ago, when an important case in which the United States Steel Corporation was concerned, was pending before the Supreme Court of New Jersey, a person who claimed to be Lamar called up Perkins and made some interesting statements relative to the action of the court.

According to the story, Perkins then had the Governor of New Jersey linked upon the telephone the next time the alleged Lamar called, and by this means the conversation was heard also by that official, who may be asked to come to Washington and testify.

"Romayne Simmons and valet, London," is the entry in the register at the Mohr, two lines under that which bears the name of Madame Nordica. Mr. Simmons is the accompanist for the great singer, and right here it may be said that he does not look the part. No one gaining the round and ruddy countenance of Mr. Simmons, and noting the absence of long and poetical curly hair, would pick him out of a crowd as a musician. In fact, Mr. Simmons resembles, slightly in appearance and greatly in action, a recent "insidious lobbyist" with whom President Wilson broke a date. He is a former Governor of Hawaii, but it's no fair mentioning his name.

The valet who accompanies Mr. Simmons bears the name of Anderson. He is a tall, young man of solemn and austere countenance, and has nothing to say. His business in life is to see that Mr. Simmons is properly attired, but he was wearing a short lease of absence yesterday, for when the representative of The Advertiser called on Mr. Simmons he found the pianist attired in a bath robe of unconventional cut and a Panama hat.

Pardon my costume, old chap," said Mr. Simmons as he received his caller. "But really, fancy costume doesn't matter much here, although I was jolly well amazed to see the natives wear quite the usual amount of clothes, you know. I had rather expected something different."

"And, too, imagine my astonishment, when I attended a ball the other night and discovered that the young ladies were not so attired in what I had been led to believe was the native style. I had understood that their dress was composed of a garland of Pele's hair and nothing much else, but I found them wearing quite ordinary blouses made of the gingham which they manufacture back home in Manchester. Of course they had grass skirts, but there was nothing extraordinary about the performance to my mind. Now in New York I was present at a little private gathering where the hula was danced by men and women, and the costume was quite different. I assure you—quite different. By the way, do these natives have ever killed anybody?"

"They haven't killed a soul since they slew Captain Cook, the discoverer of the islands," replied the interviewer.

"Captain Cook? Oh, I say now, you don't mean the little fellow who claimed to have found the North Pole until the public learned he had been spoofing them, do you?"

"Quite a different person," Mr. Simmons was assured. "Captain Cook, the discoverer of the Hawaiian Islands, has a monument erected to his memory, and every year or so the British government sends a warship here to see that it is kept in repair."

"Do they, now?" said Mr. Simmons. "That's quite new of them, isn't it?"

Remembering that the room was rather draughty and that he hoped on reaching Samoa to find real wild, uncivilized children of nature, Mr. Simmons called for "Anderson," and bade his caller a pleasant good afternoon.

Pope, Carrying Out Traditional Custom, Spent Part of the Night Praying on Apostle's Tomb

ST. PETER'S, ROME.

ROME, June 29.—(Special to The Advertiser)—Following the ancient tradition in connection with St. Peter's Eve, the Pope descended last evening to St. Peter's to pray on the tomb of the Apostle.

At sunset all the doors of the basilica were closed to the public, when accompanied by his court, the Pontiff descended from his apartment by the elevator to the Raphael loggia, from which he was carried in his chair through the Chapel of the Sacrament into St. Peter's. Here the Pope was received by the canons who paid him homage. For half an hour the Pontiff remained kneeling in prayer.

CLEVELAND, June 29.—(Special to The Advertiser)—The jury in the case of Giuseppe Pomare, the Youngstown, Ohio, Italian charged with sending threatening letters to President Wilson, demanding $5000 of him, has disagreed. Federal Judge Day announced that he would have Pomare examined by alienists.

ROME, June 29.—(Special to The Advertiser)—During the last twenty-four hours, extensive earthquake shocks have occurred in the southern part of Italy, with the result that exaggerated reports were circulated describing the disturbances as a grave disaster, with a large number of victims.

Official information received by the minister of the interior states that the earthquake caused no damage in the Province of Catanzaro and was scarcely felt there. Some houses were damaged, however, in the villages of Paola, Rossano, Morina, San Marco and other small places near Cosenza and some of the inhabitants of these villages are reported to have been slightly injured. People fled from their homes in wild panic and are camped on deserts and plains.

DIAMOND HEAD CAMP STARTS WEIRD YARN

Los Angeles Times.—A mental picture of American soldiers hanging to the slippery sides of an extinct Hawaiian crater by their left ears and right eyebrows was drawn yesterday by C. N. Walker, who manages the "Picturesque Hawaii" entertainment at the Hawaiian Opera House, after reading a dispatch relating the conversion of a perfectly good crater into a fortress of defense.

Walker says the films don't tell the story of the appearance of things today because they display the craters in eruption. Now, he declares, the dead lava is as hard as flint and as smooth as glass, and the soldiers will have great difficulty in securing a substantial anchorage for their tents. It is almost impossible to bore holes in the lava, he says, so the tent ropes must be made fast to the nearest ledges. There is no water within miles of the craters, and of vegetation there is none. All food stuff must be packed from Honolulu, and should an eruption occur while the army is encamped there the boys will not have to wait for the "retreat" to be sounded. The heat and sulphur fumes make it hotter for the soldiers than the fire of an enemy, and altogether he does not look upon the experiment of the establishment of a defensive camp there as a midsummer night's dream.

TURKEY TROT AN IMMORAL DANCE

ASBURY PARK, New Jersey, June 16.—The "tango," if taught properly, may be danced with propriety, but the "turkey trot," never, according to the decision of the American National Association of Masters of Dancing, which ended its session at the Hotel Brunswick here today. The "turkey trot," characterized as "immoral," and the dancing masters were urged to cooperate with local authorities in banishing it.

The masters decided on Cleveland, Ohio, for their convention city next year, and in 1915 the association will go to San Francisco.

PLAYWRIGHT'S GUILT HAS BEEN ESTABLISHED

NEW YORK, June 29.—(Special to The Advertiser)—Declaring that they believed the misconduct of Paul Armstrong, the playwright, who has been established as the referee who has heard the testimony of Mrs. Rolla Abell Armstrong, in the divorce suit brought against her husband, asked on Saturday for an order granting them $25,000 counsel fees. Justice Goff signed an order awarding the law. * * * * *

A proper report of the "circulation liar" featured the opening session of the recent convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America, in Baltimore, where at Honolulu was represented by George B. Curtis, of Jordan & Co., who represented the Honolulu Ad Club. The "circulation liar" was based on the griddle by James Keeley of the Chicago Tribune, who declared that the trouble between the man who publishes and the man who advertises is based on plain lying.

"That is the root of it," he said, "plain and adroit living, and with the lie there go necessarily, hand in hand, secrecy, subterfuge, lack of co-operation, and trouble—trouble for the honest publisher and trouble for the advertiser who cannot distinguish between the statement of the honest publisher and the statement of the dishonest publisher."

"It is a strange commentary on the ethics of one of the greatest industries in the world that its business integrity is at so low an ebb that its executives, before they can market their merchandise, have to submit to a third degree to have established which, if any of them, are telling the truth about what they have to sell."

"This situation, humiliating as it is to the honest publisher and distressing and troublesome to the advertiser, is due largely to the newspapers themselves. The circulation liar is not quite as old as Gtengen types, but he is not much younger."

"These men who lie about their circulation, who defraud the advertiser, are just as guilty of obtaining money under false pretences as is the cheap swindler who takes off a brass watch on a farmer under the pretension that it is gold. One of these days I hope to see this guilt made equal under the law. If an advertiser can be prosecuted and sent to jail for swindling the public, the publisher who defrauds the advertiser should occupy an adjoining cell."

"Once the real circulation liar sees the penitentiary doors opening, the situation will be clarified. The honest, truth-telling publisher will have the menace of unscrupulous competition removed from his path. All publishers will be on all fours, and the maker of a good newspaper will reap the reward of his industry, genius or whatever for the time being, and the maker of a poor newspaper will suffer for his incompetency."

With scores dying of heat in the cities and towns of the Middle West, and snow falling in Utah, Hawaii may be pardoned for referring once more to a climate which more than anything else has given it the title of the "Paradise of the Pacific," and the right to paraphrase the words of Shah Jehan: "If there is a perfect climate on earth, it is here, it is here."

For, although the mercury may soar above the one hundred mark in Chicago and drop below thirty in Utah, in Honolulu the maximum temperature yesterday was 84 degrees, the lowest 74 degrees, the mean 79 degrees. Furthermore, in this summer month, the temperature, according to the weather bureau report, has never exceeded 85 degrees in thirteen years.

WAILUKU EXAMPLE FOR HONOLULU BENCH

Mani News.—Once more has the drunken chauffeur killed his man. The latest horror is that on Oahu, where a poor unfortunate Japanese was run down and left to die—as he did—on one of the streets of Honolulu. And this sort of thing will continue as long as magistrates without any moral backbone are elevated to the police court bench. The joyriders who left another Japanese to die, after running him down, were sentenced the other day—after long delay, calculated to allow time for the public to forget the affair—to thirty days in jail. Thirty months would have been too little for the brutes. Our own magistrate in Wailuku set the Honolulu official an example when he a few weeks ago sentenced a chauffeur to ten months in jail for wrecking a car, although nobody was injured. The sort of sentence should show the Honolulu magistrate how to proceed in cases of the same sort. It is to be hoped that the man who killed the Japanese, on Tuesday night, be tried for and convicted of murder.

KANSAS CITY, June 29.—(Special to The Advertiser)—George Townsend, a wealthy Chicago railway promoter, brother of Congressman Edward Townsend, of New Jersey, committed suicide Saturday by throwing himself into the Missouri River at Kansas City, Kansas. This information was disclosed tonight by the finding of Townsend's hat, his coat and a note book, containing a letter in his handwriting, saying he was going to kill himself because he had become unbalanced by the extreme heat and ended it in the river. Congressman Townsend said tonight:

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Nearly two million soldiers of the civil war passed in grand review before President Grant at the close of the hostilities, but today less than twenty percent are living. If the average death rate continues, officials of the Pension Bureau declare, all will be dead within the next ten years.

On Memorial Day there were 167,000 survivors of the civil war, less than one thousand survivors of the Mexican war and not a single survivor of the war of 1812. The average age of the civil war veteran is seventy-one years, and according to the average death rate, there will be 49,000 fewer veterans alive next Memorial Day and 50,000 fewer in the next two years.

About $200,000,000 annually has been paid in pensions in the last two years, and the amount is higher now because of the new "dollar a day" law.

SECRETARY WOULD KEEP NAVY YARD BUSY

BOSTON, June 16.—At least one ship under way at each of the three yards, Boston, New York and Norfolk, all the time was the usual building program which Secretary Daniels, who made his first official visit to the Charlestown Navy Yard today, said he approved.

"I am convinced that it is bad business policy to have the government invest $20,000,000 in such a property as this and then practically abandon it," said he. "I am informed by the committee on the part of the House that they have the plant and the skilled men to run it, and I favor having the building of ships at Boston, New York and Norfolk."

"There is very little competition now, because the private builders combine in their bidding for government work, and this makes the running of the department very expensive. I believe that this yard should have the equipment asked for, if for no other reason than to show the private interests that the government can do its own work."

The Honolulu Construction & Draying Company has already started to fulfill its contract to fill the grounds of the Library of Hawaii with earth for grass planting.

NEW YORK, June 29.—(Special to The Advertiser)—Anson Phelps Stokes is dead, the immediate cause of death being apoplexy. Anson Phelps Stokes, long prominent in banking, political and yacht circles, was born in New York, and was a partner in Phelps, Dodge & Company, and afterward in the banking business of Phelps, Stokes & Company, with his father, James Stokes. In the late years he had been principally occupied in looking after his real estate holdings and other investments.

With just a week more to live after today, the three Filipinos condemned to die for the Kakaiki murders, Miguel Manigbas, Hilde Baubista and Domingo Rodriguez, are said to have broken down and are now awaiting the end as more or less physical wrecks.

The grim preparations for the execution are now occupying the time of the prison officials. Ropes are being fixed to block and cable and stretched to their full limit until there is no longer a millimeter's give to them and they are as unyielding as so much flexible iron. The gallows, which has been designed for almost two years, is being taken out in sections and overhauled ready for erection by the other prisoners on the night before the sentence is carried out.

High Sheriff Henry has issued several passes already to police officials who worked on the case and these newspaper men will probably form the little audience that will witness the curtain of the grim tragedy, the Chinese community in general, eager to see the final act of vengeance against the slayer of their countrymen, being barred out. Only the Chinese consul will bear witness for his people.

BULL MOOSER MAY BE A LOBBY WITNESS

(By Federal Wireless Telegraph.)
OGDEN, Utah, June 29.—(Special to The Advertiser)—Following the discovery of the naked body of a twelve-year-old girl in a trunk at the Union Station here, Mrs. Augustus Ekman of Salt Lake City, the mother, has confessed to killing her daughter. She is under arrest with D. L. Anderson, of Los Angeles, her former husband.

While Mrs. Ekman asserts she choked the child, physicians assert the child was choked to death and the condition of the neck and head bear out that assertion. The woman declares she committed the crime because the girl was an incubus and she could not take care of her.

The trunk had been checked from Salt Lake City two days ago and when Anderson appeared to have it rechecked to Salt Lake City, the railroad officials demanded that the trunk be opened, because of the peculiar odor emanating from it. When the lid was lifted, they found the remains of little Francis Williams, daughter of Mrs. Ekman by her second husband.

Anderson and the woman have been separated for fourteen years and only became reunited two days ago. They were on their way to Michigan when arrested.

The police believe the woman is shielding Anderson and expect to secure a confession along that line from her. They were taken to Salt Lake City tonight.

NOME, Alaska, June 9.—John Koron, the Norwegian naturalist who was wrecked near Cape Serge on the Siberian coast last fall and reached Nome March 21, after many harrowing experiences in crossing the ice in the Bereng Strait, left on the United States steamer cutter Bear today for Siberia. Mr. Koron will return to the scene of the wreck and attempt to recover some of the rare specimens of Arctic flowers and birds he was gathering for the private museum of John B. Thayer, a multimillionaire of Lancaster, Massachusetts, who was financing the expedition, and for the Harvard museum.

Koron left Seattle in 1911 on the gasoline schooner, Kittie Wake and went north along the Siberian coast to the mouth of the River Kolyma, up which he sailed 500 miles farther than a white man had ever penetrated before. During the winter the gasoline supply gave out and the Kittie Wake was allowed to drift down the river with the ice in the spring. At the mouth of the Kolyma Koron set sail for Koliukin, about 200 miles from the island of the same name. Here they met the American trading schooner Morris, Captain William Schroeder, and the schooner took the Kittie Wake in tow, intending to spend the winter of 1912-13 on the island of Koliukin.

At Cape Serge the boats were run ashore to keep them from being crushed in the ice, but a great storm arose driving the ice over the boats and crushing them into matchwood. Many of the supplies, furs and specimens were taken ashore before the boats were wrecked.

After spending some time on the mainland, Koron, Sam Gottschalk and two others set out in a whaleboat for Big Diomed Island, but were forced to return after a thrilling experience, during which Koron's feet and hands were frozen. Later Koron, Gottschalk and another succeeded in reaching the island, but lost their whaleboat in making a landing. They remained on the island for three months, subsisting on walrus meat.

Finally Gottschalk, after two unsuccessful attempts, crossed the ice in the Bereng Strait to the Alaskan shore, where he arrived March 20, having with him on a sledge $2000 worth of furs. The next day Koron, who had followed Gottschalk, reached Cape Prince of Wales, Alaska, and complained Gottschalk had stolen his furs. Gottschalk was intercepted on his way to Nome and is now in jail awaiting trial. The third member of the party which wintered on Big Diomed was too ill to make the trip over the ice and a rescue party was sent for him.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Georgious military uniforms trimmed in gold lace will be few and far between at the White House functions during President Wilson's administration, according to persons who should know.

Major Thomas L. Rhoades, Military Aid at the White House for more than a year, it is said, will retire shortly to resume his medical work in the army. Major Rhoades wanted to get back into the service when President Taft left office, but President Wilson asked him to remain for a while at least.

Major Rhoades is not in Washington now. He recently underwent an operation for appendicitis, and is fast recovering.

President Wilson's love for the plain is evidenced in his shyness in allowing himself to get into the limelight on his calls around Washington, and his decision that a uniformed military aid should not accompany him whenever he travels.

Thirty-three Deaths in Chicago Alone, While Health Officials Declare Death List Will Grow Daily Larger Until Weather Breaks—Ray of Hope Seen in Western Despatches.

CHICAGO, June 29.—(Special to The Advertiser)—Reports received at the office of large grain concerns, from their agents in the field, say that the oat crop has been practically ruined in Illinois, Missouri, Indiana and Iowa by the intense heat and lack of moisture. Experts say the crop, already short and heading about eleven inches from the ground, cannot survive the recent siege of hot weather.

Estimates place the loss in the four States at $20,000,000.

Many Babies Dying.
In addition to the death of twelve adults, since ten o'clock last night, twenty-one infants perished today directly from heat.

Officials of the health department say this number will be increased daily until there is a general drop in temperature.

A ray of hope was seen in the despatches from Salt Lake City and Duluth, Minnesota, where furs and overcoats have been much in vogue because of a remarkable drop in the temperature.

A rumor was spread among the men of the army stationed on Oahu that an extraordinary method of increasing the number of soldiers here without increasing the number of regiments would soon be invoked, but the rumor runs squarely up against the Act of Congress which limits the maximum strength of an infantry company to one hundred and fifty men, including sergeants and corporals.

The rumor was that the war department had decided to increase infantry companies here to 250 men, which would give each regiment 3000 men. By sending only one more regiment here from the mainland, the infantry strength would thereby reach the decreed total of 12,000 men. This force would be exclusive of the field and coast artillery and cavalry.

Congress has limited the strength of regiments by allowing only 150 men to a company," said Major Conklin, chief of staff, Hawaiian Department, yesterday.

"The law permits one hundred and twenty-seven enlisted men and corporals and sergeants enough to make a total of one hundred and fifty men per company, on a war strength basis. We can't go beyond that. Our regiments here should carry about 2000 men each on the war-strength basis. They are now being filled up with recruits, but recruits are coming in slowly on mainland. This is because of the seven-year enlistment—four years with the colors and three in the reserve. This frightens off a lot of men."

SURGEONS OPERATE TO STOP BOY'S GROWTH

PHILADELPHIA, June 15.—Surgeons at the Medico-Chirurgical Hospital are anticipating the successful outcome of an operation on a fifteen-year-old boy named John Michael, who is six feet seven inches tall, for physical overgrowth, by removing a portion of the pituitary gland from the base of his brain.

This operation has never been performed before for such a reason. The pituitary gland or pineal body is believed to control human growth, and to stop the boy from outgrowing his constitutional strength they have decided to perform an experiment shown to be successful on the dog.

Michael outgrew all his comrades and would not go to school because his fellow pupils joked him about his size, and the smaller children feared him. When he got on the trolley cars everybody tittered, and he had to stoop when he entered a door.

At home his father had to have an extra bed made for him, and at the hospital where he was undergoing the treatment a new cot was necessary to accommodate him.

Mentally and in other respects the boy is normal. He is simply growing beyond his strength and years, and the surgeons say that if the operation is not performed he will become afflicted with a mental disease, for the overgrowth of the body will affect his mind.
